On the first day of Ellen's stay, Keiko tried to talk about her family with Ellen. But it was sometimes difficult for her to talk about her family in English. Keiko said, "( ① ) My English isn't good."

The next day, Keiko and Ellen visited a castle in Hinode City. Ellen was excited because the castle was very big. Ellen asked, "When was this castle built?" Keiko said, "Well, about four hundred or five hundred years ago .... I don't know the exact year." After lunch, Keiko and Ellen walked around Hinode City. Keiko said, "We have a festival on this street every fall." Ellen asked, "What do people in this city do in the festival?" Keiko answered, "We enjoy eating many kinds of food that we can buy on the street. We enjoy dancing here, too. But these are the only things I know about the festival." When they went home, Keiko said, "I wanted to explain the castle and the festival in my city, but I know only a few things about them." Ellen said, "I know you tried hard. Thank you."

On the last day, Ellen said to Keiko, "I had a good time with you here. I want to tell my friends about my experience in Japan." Keiko was happy to hear that and said to herself, "I had a good experience. Now I have two things I have to do."

One day in July, Keiko visited Australia. She stayed at Ellen's house. Keiko and Ellen went to Ellen's high school together. I went to old people living near my house to learn about my city. Learning about my city was interesting." Ellen said, "I see." Keiko said, "During your stay in Japan, I thought it was necessary for me to study English hard and learn about my city."

A boy came to Keiko and Ellen when they were walking to Ellen's house. The boy said, "Konnichiwa," and introduced himself in Japanese. He was Bob, one of Ellen's friends. Keiko was surprised and said, "You speak Japanese well. Why can you speak Japanese?" Bob said, "Ellen talked about her experience in Japan after she came back.
